Mr. J. J. Mullaney whose reputation as a duck hunter is province wide, was a visitor in town early this week. In company with another congenial spirit he spent a couple of hours at "Bill" Alexander's slough, on Monday evening. A number of very nice cartridges were shot.

We understand that the "Village Fathers" will be asked to build a sidewalk on the south side of Second Ave., E. from First Street E. to Second Street East. The report that a sidewalk for Fifth Ave. will also be asked for, is without foundation.

Miss Ruby Scott and Miss Eva Peterson entertained a number of friends at a duck supper on Monday evening. The meal, which was a triumph of the culinary art, was thoroughly enjoyed by all the guests.

Mrs. A. A. Owens and her daughter, Edith, left last Saturday for Sibbald where they will spend the week with Mrs. Owens' parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hunter.

Mr. P. H. Peterson returned from Saskatoon this morning after spending a couple of days there.

A new office building is under course of construction on Main Street, situated between Mr. A. A. Owens' Hardware Store and the building recently occupied by Otto Smith.

Mr. Geo. Kennedy of Medicine Hat will arrive at Mr. Robert Marsden's place on Sec. 33-27-5 west of the 4th, on Tuesday the 14th. of September, with a fine bunch of heavy work horses for sale. If you are wanting any it will pay you to see him.

The Women's Institute will meet on Saturday, Sept. 11th, at 2:30 p.m., in the Methodist Church. The members are requested to bring their favorite recipes for pickles and storing vegetables. A paper will be read on the "Preservation of Fruit." All ladies will be given a welcome.

Mr. Dan Irving, who left for Saskatoon on Tuesday morning, returned town to-day.

Dr. Taylor, Dentist, at Abask who is a graduate of Northwestern University, Chicago, uses the latest methods in making gold inlays, crowns, bridgework plates, etc. Gas administered for extracting. In Abask all the time.

Aerial Bombardment of Saarbruecken by Allies

The aerial bombardment of Saarbruecken, recorded in Monday's official statement from the French war office, was probably the most notable of its kind during the war.

Forty French and British aeroplanes circled over the town, and accurately threw bombs on the small arm's factory, the barracks, the railway station, the engine sheds and other military buildings. Several hundred yards of the permanent way of the railways were destroyed and many recruits in the barracks were killed or wounded.

An armored train that had been summoned from Metz, bringing aerial guns on trucks, arrived too late to interfere with the operations of the aviators.

All forty aeroplanes, after discharging about 400 projectiles, returned safely to Nancy.

Government will Collect One-half of Seed Grain Repayments

Hon. Dr. Hoche, minister of the interior, announced last Tuesday morning that it had been decided to ask for payment this year of one half only of the seed grain and fodder advances, together with interest. As for advances for other relief these will not be insisted on this year. Where, however, no seed grain or fodder has been provided, but relief only, one-half of the amount advanced for relief will be expected to be returned.

It is pointed out that it is not an easy matter to work out a system of collection without entailing too great expense of organization. Dr. Hoche appeals to the purchasers of grain to co-operate in matters of collections. An official memorandum issued adds: "The minister confidently hopes that all who have received assistance, and the people of the country generally, will accept the policy of the reduced amount to be collected this year as fair and equitable, and that all will co-operate and lend their assistance to work out the scheme successfully."

A Talk of Conscription For Canada

At Fredericton, N. B., a meeting was held last Tuesday of the citizens for the purpose of deciding on methods to stimulate recruiting, prominent men went on record as favoring conscription for Canada.

Bishop Richardson, the Rev. Mr. Nouns, Dr. P. C. Allen, and others came out boldly with statements that Canada needed conscription, and even went so far as to suggest that a resolution be passed calling upon the Dominion Government to adopt such methods.

A resolution was not forthcoming the suggestion however made that it be left over until the Imperial Government had taken some action regarding conscription in England.

Every mention of conscription by the various speakers was heartily applauded.

Submarine Work A Blunder

Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, contributes the following letter to the British Press:

"Much has been written about Germany's military methods and aims on land; not so much about her aims and methods at sea. Yet in truth the two are so intimately connected that nothing can be understood apart from the other.

"In 1900 Germany first proclaimed her policy of building a fleet against Great Britain and from the point of view of her own ambitions the policy perfectly sound one. She aimed at world domination and against world domination the British fleet from the time of Queen Elizabeth to the present has always been found the surest and most effective protection. Germans have every reason to be aware of the fact, for without the British Fleet Frederick the Great must have succumbed to his enemies, and Prussia would surely have shaken off the Napoleonic tyranny.

"Whatever may be thought about the freedom of the seas in any of its various meanings, the freedom in England is due in no small matter to British ships and British sailors.

"It takes time and money to create a great fleet and German statesmen were too wise to suppose that they could at once call into an existence a navy capable of contending with a power such as they saw clearly enough was the most formidable obstacle to their aggressive projects. But they did not at that account doubt the immediate advantages which their maritime policy conferred upon them. They calculated that a powerful fleet, even though it was numerically inferior to that of Great Britain, would nevertheless render the latter impotent, since no British Government would dare risk a conflict which, however successful might leave them in the end with naval forces inferior to those of some third power.

"This is the policy clearly, though cautiously expressed in the famous preamble to the Navy Bill. It is unnecessary to add that the German Navy entertained much more ambitious designs. So far neither the designs of the German Government nor those of the German League have met with any measure of success. The British fighting fleet has become relatively stronger than it was three months ago, and there is no reason to suppose that during the future course of the war this process is likely to be arrested.

"It is plain that after six months of hostilities Admiral Von Tirpitz and the Government which he serves arrived at the same conclusion. They saw that the old policy had broken down and that a new policy must be devised; submarines they thought might succeed where dreadnoughts and cruisers failed.

"The change, no doubt, was adopted with extreme reluctance, and many searchings of the heart. Admission of failure in itself is unpleasant. Though we cannot regard a Government responsible for the Belgian atrocities as either scrupulous or humane, even the most reckless Government does not desire to perpetrate unnecessary crimes.

"As to what the German navy must have felt about the new policy we can only conjecture. But German Ministers would have thought himself disgraced had he sent to the bottom unresisting merchant ships with all hands on board. It cannot have been an agreeable reflection, even to the German Navy League that the first notable performance of the German fleet should resemble piracy rather than privateering.

"We may, therefore, safely assume that nothing but hope of a decisive success would have induced the German Ministers to initiate this new stain upon the honour of their country. Yet decisive success has not been attained and does not seem to be in sight.

"I claim no gifts of prophecy; I make no boast of the future. But of the past I can speak with assurance, and it may interest you to know that while the losses inflicted upon the German submarines have been formidable, British mercantile tonnage is at this moment greater than when the war began.

"It is true that by this method of warfare many innocent persons, women and children, as well as men, neutrals as well as belligerents, have been robbed and killed. But it is not only the innocent who have suffered; the criminals also have paid a heavy toll. Some have been rescued and are prisoners of war; but from the very nature of submarines it must often happen that they drag their crews with them to destruction and those who send them forth on their unhonoured mission wait for their return in vain.

"Herein lies the explanation of the amazing change which has come over the diplomatic attitude of Germany towards the United States. Men ask themselves why the sinking of Lusitania with a loss of over 1,100 men, women and children, was welcomed throughout Germany with a shout of triumph, while the sinking of the Arabic was accepted in melancholy silence.

"Is it because in the intervening months the United States has become stronger or Germany weaker? Is it because the attitude of the President varied? Is it because the arguments of the Secretary of State have become more persuasive? Is it because German opinion has at last revolted against lawless cruelty?

"No. The reason is found elsewhere. It is found in the fact that the authors in the submarine policy have had time to measure its effects—that the deeds which were merely crimes in May, in September are seen to be blunders."

And now they are claiming that wood is a good substitute for cotton in the production of explosives. Sure, we have noticed the same fact ourselves when we have run our head in to a door in the dark.

"The spirit of the nation must be stirred," says a contemporary. Well, that's where the girls come in. Nothing like a "spoon" for that purpose.

A casual remark at the dinner table by one of the guests made us draw out our note book. Speaking of his recent vacation the guest in question said he had spent a most enjoyable time at Banff, hugging the ladies. Oh fie!

Jimmy Murray says he will never tell us anything again.

Our Calgary reporter advises us of a rumour which is in circulation. The rumour has it that a barister, who is well known in this district, was observed coming out of a fashionable candy store in Calgary, with a box of chocolates on one arm and a lady on the other. And now we are wondering whether the chocolates were charged up to "Hiskop".

The only thing to chronicle about the German Fleet up to the time of writing is that it still rests on an even Kiel.
